A Trip at Sea

*by Jesse Rudolph Creech
World War II*

As God's golden sun slowly hides its face
Beyond the waves of the deep blue sea,
A convoy is plowing at a top speed race
To some distant land where no man is free.

While on the starboard deck by the rail I stood,
Gazing to the west at the evening star,
To forget my homeland if only I could,
My mother, my sweetheart, and loved ones afar.

God only knows what was on my mind;
The many troubles and dangers I face so brave.
A free life with loved ones and their smiles behind,
It's a flag in my life that will always wave.

God keep my home and my loved ones free;
Help them Oh Lord along their way,
That they will do their best and not worry over me,
Until I'm home some future day.
