When Albrecht Dürer (from whose "Folded Hands" the cover design was adapted) was a poor struggling artist, a friend of his who also aspired to be an artist made an agreement with him that he would do manual labor to earn their living while Dürer studied and painted. Later, it was planned, he should have his turn to paint. But when success came to Dürer his friend's hands had become so twisted and stiff that he could no longer paint. One day, seeing his friend's work-worn hands in prayer, Dürer thought, "I can never give back the lost skill of those hands, but I can show my feeling of love and gratitude by painting his hands as they are now, folded in prayer, to show my appreciation of a noble and unselfish character."

OBITUARY

The impact of a man's life is seldom realized until he is gone. Even the most obscure among us leave a void by his passing. It is to be reckoned, therefore that great lives leave an unbridgable chasm between earthly life and death.

London Womble wove an integral pattern of loyalty and compassion among the people of his church and community.

He was generous, co-operative and socially concerned. These principles were not something he called into play at opportune times. They were the yardstick by which he measured the cut of his own humanitarian instincts, as well as those of his associates.

He has served this church as class-leader, trustee, steward and treasurer. He was a member of the Light of the World #711, he was past master and treasure. He was also a member of the Friendship Chapter #521 Order of the Eastern Star where He served as Chaplain.

As a husband he was kind, sympathetic, understanding and forgiving. He will be sorely missed by his family and friends.

Mr. Womble was the son of the late John and Mary Miller Womble. He was born in Siler City, North Carolina November 18, 1908. He departed this life April 25, 1968 at Chatham Hospital, Siler City, N. C.

He leaves to mourn their loss: a wife, Mrs. Susie Marsh Womble, 1 brother, Mr. Gaston Womble, Siler City, N. C.; 5 sisters, Mrs. Juanita Siler, Mrs. Aileen Fox, Siler City; Miss Ollie Womble, Greensboro,
