PREFACE

Within will be found the correct census of the inhabitants of Carthage, Pinehurst, Southern Pines, Vass, Cameron, Aberdeen, and Hemp, their occupation and streets upon which they live.

Also a classification of the business interests, which go to make Moore County one of the most flourishing counties in the state.

The census was taken by a house to house canvas and if any names have been omitted it is the fault of the people who gave them to the canvasser.

The compiler has been very careful in gathering the facts and has aimed to make the book thoroughly reliable.

A limited space has been given to advertising, which has been eagerly sought for and obtained by the most enterprising business men of the county.

The compiler hereby makes acknowledgement to all for their assistance in giving the necessary data.

The city officials will see how necessary it is to name their streets and place the names at all intersections of streets and also to number the houses.

HISTORY

Sir Walter Raleigh landed on the shores of North Carolina, July, 1584.

John White commissioned Governor of the City of Raleigh, July, 1587.

William Drummond was the first Governor of the North Carolina Territory in 1663.

The first Assembly to make laws for North Carolina was in 1669.

The two Carolinas were separated in 1697.

The first church to be established here was in 1705, what is now Williamson County.

First printing press in the Territory was in 1749.

In 1754 the Territory had—militia, 15,000; exemptions, 1,000; outposts, 1,500; slaves, 10,000.

Battle of Alamance, May 16, 1771. First blood shed for liberty.

First popular Assembly met at Newbern, August 25, 1774.

Josiah Martin was the last of the Royal Governors, 1775.

Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence, May, 1775.

Provincial Congress met at Hillsboro in August 1775.

Provincial Council of Safety met at Wilmington in June, 1776; while assembled the National Declaration of Independence reaches them, while in session.

Richard Caswell elected Governor of State in November, 1776.

State University incorporated in 1789 and located at Chapel Hill.

Hinton Jones, of Wilmington, was the first student.

Rev. David Kerr was the first president of the University.

The State had three counties in 1729, viz—Albemarle, Bath and Claredon.

MOORE COUNTY

Moore County was formed in 1784 from Cumberland County and named after Hon. Alfred Moore, one of the United States Supreme Judges. This county is located near the center of the state, North and South and East and West. It has a population of about 23,000, 7,000 of which are colored.

The northern part of the county is hilly and has a clay soil, while the southern part is level and sandy. The Seaboard Railway runs through the county and a couple of other roads are within its borders. The county is supplied with abundant water power only waiting to be harnessed up. It also has gold, talc, clay and millstones. Moore County is situated in the heart of the peach district of North Carolina. It also has the two noted winter resorts—Pinehurst and Southern Pines, where thousands of northern people spend their winters with pleasure.

There are more peaches shipped out of this county than any other in the state.

A new court house, costing $160,000, was finished and ready for occupancy just about two years ago.

CARTHAGE, N. C.

Carthage is the capitol of Moore County and was formerly called Feaganville. It is 900 feet above sea-level and was settled before the Revolution and was noted for being the home of some of the most noted Tories in the State.

It revels in ancient U. S. history and the citizens recount with great pleasure the fact that they can show a mulberry stump that Cornwallis' horse nipped off the top when it was a small shrub.

It has two hotels, one fine large high school, which cost $60,000 and also a graded school that cost $20,000. Two colored schools are within the corporate limits. Prof. O. B. Walsh is the superintendent of the city schools. There are 15 white teachers with 423 pupils and six colored teachers with 194 pupils.

It has one bank; one newspaper; water works, owned by the city; a volunteer fire department; a local telephone system and one railroad, the Moore County Central, which connects the north and south part of the county. The Carolina Light and Power Co. furnish the electricity both for lights and power.

There are three churches, Presbyterian, Baptist and Methodist. There are only three secret orders—the Masonic, J. O. U. A. M., and the Woodmen of the World.

A knitting mill and a large buggy works, two lumber yards and a machine shop is the extent of the business here outside of the mercantile establishments which display all the commodities that the citizens demand.

The town is not as energetic as it might be owing to the fact that most of the people are not compelled to go after the almighty dollar.

CITY OFFICERS

Mayor, R. L. Burns; clerk, W. H. Currie; city council, W. H. Currie, J. A. Lang, O. D. Wallace, C. F. Barnes, P. K. Kennedy.

The population is slightly under 1,000.

CAMERON, N. C.

Cameron is located on the Seaboard Railway, ten miles south of Carthage, in a very productive farming center. It is a small village of 200 inhabitants. Business is carried on here in about the same style it was fifty years ago. But very little enterprise, if any.

VASS, N. C.

When the Seaboard Railway was built there was a station at this place called Bynum. All there was here was a place with a siding to load lumber, turpentine and resin. Later on the name was changed to Winder. It went under this name until eighteen years ago when it was changed to Vass.

The town remained as only a stopping place for the local train up to about five years ago when the town took on new life and some men with a great amount of people took hold of things. There has been more building done in the past five years than during all of its existence.

The products of this section are tobacco, cotton, peaches and dewberries.

There is one bank, one cotton mill, one newspaper, The Pilot, which was adjudged to be the best weekly paper in the state by the state editors in convention, a local telephone system, one tobacco warehouse, two churches, a graded school with nine teachers and 275 pupils. Prof. W. D. Mathews is superintendent of the town schools and mayor of the town.

The town is located ten miles south of Carthage on the Seaboard Railway, and sixty-eight miles southwest of Raleigh. It has 295 residents.

J. M. Brown's, Hemp, N. C.

HEMP, N. C.

Hemp is a town of about four hundred inhabitants, and although it has a small number of residents, it has mercantile establishments that do as much business as any place in Moore County.

It is located on the Norfolk Southern Railway about twelve miles from Carthage. It has a prosperous bank, a silk mill, two lumber plants and a Presbyterian Academy, with about 100 students. There are two dormitories, one for the girls and one for the boys. The public school building where the town pupils go to school is a very poor affair.

The merchants in most cases are wide-awake and and in consequence they enjoy a good trade.

ABERDEEN, N. C.

This town was started in 1888, twelve years after the Seaboard Railway was completed. It formerly went by the name of Buie's Crossing, but the name was changed to Aberdeen in 1888. It was chartered in 1893. Good schools for both white and black are maintained. More peaches and dewberries are shipped from this point than any other in the country. There are three railroads—the Seaboard, the Norfolk Southern and A. & R. Railways.

A large crate factory, several bonded warehouses for tobacco and cotton, a peach exchange, one bank, two hotels, and numerous mercantile establishments. Some very fine church buildings and some very fine mansions.

Several miles of paved streets, electric lights, telephone service and most everything modern. This town is the gateway to Pinehurst for tourists. All Seaboard trains leave the tourists here and a short line takes them up to Pinehurst.

SOUTHERN PINES, N. C.

Along about 1884 John T. Patrick bought the present site of Southern Pines for 50c per acre. And in 1886 what was called the New England Mining & Estate Co. laid it out on the generous lines that are extant here today.

It is located on the Seaboard Railway, about six miles from Pinehurst. Up to a few years ago Mr. Patrick had a percentage on every ticket sold to Southern Pines, which made him independently wealthy.

The town is located in the famous peach belt of North Carolina and is fast becoming one of the famous winter resorts of the country. It is the most modern town in Moore County and its citizens are full of pep and with their up-to-date Chamber of Commerce they do not overlook anything that will redound to the benefit of the town or its citizens. The ‘Native Son’ idea has been eliminated and every person “stands on his own tub.”

The normal population of the town is about 1,000, but with the coming of the six months residents in the winter, the population is swelled up to nearly 3,000 people. The town is modern, having water works, sewerage, telephone, electric lights, paved streets and a city directory.

S. B. Richardson is the very popular mayor and under his administration the town has made great strides along the way of improvements.

Fine large high school building, occupying a whole square, affords ample facilities for the education of the youths and children.

There are four churches, the Baptist, the Congregational, Episcopal and Catholic. The Masonic order has a blue lodge—two Chapters, one Council a Commandery, and a Magnolia Chapter. The I. O. O. F. has a flourishing order. The American Legion has a post and there is also a Community Club. The Civic Club has been doing yeoman service for the town. The Girl Scouts also have a flourishing order. Then there is the Country Club, which has a very fine building west of town on the Aberdeen Road. One bank and a great number of mercantile establishments furnish almost everything in their line.

While there are about 15 hotels that cater to the residents and tourists in almost any style that can be desired with prices according.

PINEHURST, N. C.

James W. Tuft, of Boston, Mass., started this winter resort in 1896. It is located in the long leaf pine district. It has a very mild climate and is one of the most famous winter resorts in the South. Especially so to all lovers of golf, tennis and polo.

It is a close corporation and Tuft owns the controlling interest. There are only a few business places here that are not owned by the corporation.

Some of the houses are owned by outside parties, but upon the leased land of the company. It is strictly a winter resort and only a few care takers stay here the year round. For this reason the directory of this place is omitted, as it is purely transient.
