“Hey Honey”, “Hey Poo”

Those were the words I always said to you. There will never be enough words to truly express the way I feel. But as time goes on I am sure my wounds will heal. I will hold close to my heart all the memories from the past, the good, the bad and All the many many times you made me laugh. I'm still a little upset about all the milestones in my life you will never get to see. But honey, I know my #1 fan will always be looking down and protecting me. The seasons will change and so many other things will too. But one thing that won't is all the love I have in my heart for you. Don't worry about me and Moon, as we will be okay, we're just a little sad right now, that our honey has been taken away. But your in a better place now you got your parents and your brother. Now all that's left to figure out is “what's your chair gonna do?” But just look out for me and Moon and I'll lead the way. We're just saying our temporary goodbyes until we see you again one day. But until that day comes I'll say this over and over again...I'll miss you daddy, I love you my honey, my best friend

Love,
Poo

Frank, you left us quickly and suddenly. None of us were prepared. But you have had and will always have a powerful and lasting impact on our lives. We have always loved you, but God has always loved you best!!!

Obituary

Witty, humorous, and direct...A big man with a big heart and love for his family, describes this husband, father, brother, neighbor, friend and confidante. Frankie Carl Stone was born on January 11, 1950 to the late William "Lil Tommie" Stone and Mary Yarborough Stone in Pittsboro, North Carolina. The youngest of three children, Frankie was called home by God's Heavenly Angels on April 5, 2011.

A bright student, Frankie began his education at Horton High School, graduating in 1968. He then furthered his education at Livingston College, earning his Bachelor of Arts degree in 1972. Frankie returned to Chatham County to live and began working at UNC Hospitals where he eventually became a supervisor in the Transportation Department. As a supervisor, Frankie took his job seriously and could always be counted on to be fair and impartial. He retired from UNC Hospitals in 2007 after 30 years of dedicated service. An avid gardener, Frankie loved to tend to his garden and grow vegetables for his family and friends each summer.

Always known to be funny and a joy to be around, Frankie was also a direct man, who was quick to tell you exactly what was on his mind! You could always count on Frankie to be blatantly, yet lovingly honest. It was his quick wit, great humor and uncanny wisdom that will be missed most. Preceding him in death were his parents and his brother and best friend Joseph C. Stone.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS:

When our load seemed hard to bear, we looked around and all of our friends and family were there. With food, flowers, thoughts and spoken words; the prayers you said which played a part, in easing the pain that is in our hearts. So from our hearts, in which you all tried to mend, we thank you sincerely again and again for being truly wonderful family and friends.
